Castletown Church Meeting

After the Novena Mass on Monday there is a meeting in St. Joseph's Church, Castletown Kinneigh, about works being considered at the church.

The issues to be addressed include (a) the church is inaccessible and unsafe for people who use wheelchairs or have mobility difficulties, (b) the toilet facilities are inadequate and dated, (c) the boiler room is inside the sacristy and is a hazard, (d) the fabric and insulation of the entrance porch have failed over time, (e) it is 25 years since the church was painted, and (f) some parents need a quiet room where they can be with or take a child who may become upset during Mass.

Providing comfortable and safe access in and out of the church is the priority and it has been examined several times over the years. In consultation with a local architect, a solution has been found. Plans have also been developed which would address all the other issues. The plans have been professionally costed.

The purpose of Monday's meeting is to provide the information in detail to the congregation, to allow people time to consider the plans in conversation with fellow parishioners, to outline issues and observations for further consideration, and to help the parish priest in conjunction with the Parish Finance Committee and the Church Care Committee to make a decision about the next steps — if any.

The drawings of the plans and other information will be available in the church for viewing from Sunday onwards. They will be in the church on Monday evening also.

Tues 10th, the Novena concludes with a parish Mass at 7.30pm in Enniskeane in which we also remember in a particular way the people whose funerals have taken place in our parish in the past year.
